

June ACT is uncertain. What should YOU do now?

Have you already started your ACT prep?

YES | NO

Were you planning to take the June exam?

YES | NO

Are you close to your goal score?

YES | NO

AIM FOR JUNE BUT BEWARE

If June was likely to be your best shot, you can cross your fingers and hope that you're able to test. But plan now to continue studying toward July in the likely event of a June cancellation in your area.

PLAN FOR JULY OR FALL

Depending on your progress, move to either July (registration is open) or a fall date. Then, don't stop prepping— take advantage of the extra time. But consider slowing down your ACT prep to only a few hours each week.

STAY THE COURSE

Stick to your current ACT prep plan and you'll be ready for the July or fall tests. For most students, this means 4–5 hours of prep per week; a mix of practice exams, tutoring, and independent study.

START IN MAY

Take a diagnostic exam in late April to see how far you are from your goals. You can use that data to determine how much you need to prep. Then start actively studying in May.
